5. What are the expected long-term community impacts of the project?

The Dictionary Project concept began in 1992 when Annie Plummer of Savannah, Georgia, gave 50 dictionaries to children who attended a school close to her home. Since its implementation in 1995, over 18 million children have received dictionaries because others saw the same need in communities all over the country. The original goal of providing dictionaries to all third-grade students in South Carolina was met in 1999. In 2002, the Wall Street Journal published a story about the project, and the Dictionary Project took on a national purpose and expanded its mission to include all 50 states. The program is typically implemented in the third grade, since this is the age when dictionary skills are usually taught. Educators describe third grade as the time when a student transitions from learning to read to reading to learn. In working with the administrators, principal and teachers schools in Colleyville, Grapevine, and South Lake Carroll , the Southlake Rotary Club has confirmed the 3rd grade as an appropriate age to give each student a personalized dictionary

6. If a cooperating organization was involved, what was its role?

The schools collaborated with us to give out the dictionaries.
