Community service is a crucial part of every strong community in addition to being very rewarding for the individuals who choose to give of themselves. When people come together through service to the community they build connections. We all find our own small circle of friends and colleagues, but getting to know other community members through service gives people broader perspectives on a wide variety of issues. Many social and professional connections can be made while providing a service to the community. When people have a sense of belonging that creates a sense of pride. A community that feels bonded together is stronger overall, and more likely to be successful in improving and maintaining their community.

With my degree in Music and Audio Recording/Music Performance there are some specific areas that I anticipate using those skills to serve my community. I will perform at assisted learning and other community facilities to bring enjoyment to those who may not be able to go out on their own for entertainment. I will also perform at community events and fundraisers, and offer my services as a sound technician at many of those same events. I will also give back to the community by providing music lessons to those who wish to develop their own musical skills.

To the Selection Committee:

I am writing this letter to recommend Caden VanSwol for your scholarship. I have known Caden for two years. Last year, he was a student in my Chemistry class and joined the Environmental Science Club of which I am the sponsor. I really enjoyed having Caden in my class as he took the initiative and took on a valuable role as greeter in our class during the pandemic when people were needing cheered up. He has also taken on a leadership role in the Club and proven himself to be dependable and organized. Caden is a very caring person and is always respectful and helpful in class and in life toward others. When he sees a need, he will step up and try to help. He is very responsible and when given a task always follows through.

Caden is a very hardworking, conscientious student who has been very involved in school activities. Besides his leadership role in the Environmental Science Club, he has been very involved in band, jazz band, and show choir all through high school. His music is very important to him and he has made it a huge priority in his life. He has been selected to ILMEA All District Band 5 years and to the ILMEA All State Band/Orchestra 2 years. Caden's academic ability, character, and service earned his selection into the National Honor Society. Through the NHS, he has been involved in leadership and service opportunities.

Caden is planning a future career in music. I believe he will be very successful in college and the future because of his hard work and dedication to his education. I highly recommend Caden for your scholarship.

Sincerely,

Julie Morris

Emma Schnitzler

How as a citizen can I change lives through service?

As a young girl, I have always wanted to be helpful which led me in a desire to be an environmental attorney and fight to preserve our planet. Water is a necessity to live; which is why when we as humans see dire situations like those of Flint, Michigan; we feel the need to take a stand. I have helped keep my local area clean working on roadside cleanups a few weekends of the year. As well as working on the Kankakee River as part of the National Waterway Cleanup Day. This is one of many projects conducted by the Environmental Science Club at Manteno High School. I was a citizen of my community, county, state, and country have probably affected the lives of people through these acts of service and I don't even know it.

It is my belief that doing service and not knowing how it will affect others is one of the most selfless things you can do. On paper what I do with my spare time looks good, and that is why some people do acts of service. The idea that they can get recognition, some scholarship, or attention for being a good person is what motivates them to act. I simply want to help people. Everyone deserves to have true happiness and that physically can't come until their basic needs are met. It has been proven through psychological studies. I can't fix everything in someone's life, but I can clean up my community in the hope that one less piece of trash polluting someone's water source will improve the water quality for many.

To Whom It May Concern,

It is with great pleasure that I write this letter of recommendation for Emma Schnitzler. Emma is a student who embodies the qualities that any organization would admire: passion, sincerity, perseverance, and creativity. She would represent any business or school with distinction.

Emma exemplifies all of these outstanding qualities through her achievements in the classroom. She is both intrinsically motivated and passionate about learning. It is this intense passion and sense of accountability for her own learning that make her a truly delightful student. Though I have never had the pleasure of teaching Emma in my own classroom, she has frequently stopped by my room to deliberate topics discussed in her classes, hoping to water those discussion seeds planted by her teachers. She has always been proud of her accomplishments and works hard to do her best in everything while also pushing herself, taking advanced courses and maintaining a full schedule.

Emma carefully balances both her rigorous course load with her participation in extracurricular activities, achieving highly in both. She has participated in the Environmental Science club as well as the Interact club during her time at Manteno High School, volunteering to complete projects and dedicating countless hours to both. Another testament to Emma's character is her active participation in Manteno's chapter of Best Buddies. Emma's versatility as a student is further demonstrated by her participation in Magic, which is Manteno's competitive show choir. She exhibits her role in the school community as a leader by serving as the president of the Environmental Science club, being a member of National Honor Society, and helping to pilot a Color Guard program in Manteno's marching band, another group Emma is a part of. Emma further illustrates her prowess as a performer by excelling in Speech team, a group I coach, even taking the team to sectionals last year. In combination with her course work, the scope of the demands is tremendous. Emma must manage her time in an extremely efficient manner, work well with disparate groups of people, solve problems with creativity collectively and individually, and maintain focus on high standards at all times. She exceeds expectations in all areas. She is highly involved, and her gregarious nature combined with her passion and work ethic will be an asset as she pursues her professional goals.

My own personal interactions with Emma have left no doubt in my mind that she is a student I will remember forever. Not only does she compete on my speech team, but Emma also works for me in the library as one of my aides during the school day. She is also on the officer board of the Teen Advisory Committee, of which I am the sponsor. In addition, she writes her own poetry and has even been published in a poetry competition. Emma's willingness to help, excitement to contribute and discuss, and passion and excellence with which she approaches life are exactly the sort of qualities any admissions committee should seek to add to their organization.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Carrie Keppner—ckeppner@manteno5.org
